

Ecuadorian High and Low Voltage Complete Sets of Equipment

AI Overview

Ecuador offers a range of complete high and low voltage electrical equipment solutions through established local suppliers like Inproel, Silvatech, and Esemec, covering everything from switchgear and transformers to automation and monitoring systems.

Key Suppliers and Offerings

Inproel S.A. has over 50 years of experience in Ecuador's electrical sector, providing high, medium, and low voltage equipment, including distribution systems, measurement devices, automation, lighting, and generators. They offer nationwide coverage with offices in Guayaquil and Quito, and provide customized solutions tailored to industrial, commercial, and residential needs, emphasizing quality, safety, and sustainability.

Silvatech S.A., established in 1999, specializes in medium- and low-voltage equipment and offers components such as ABB instrument transformers, Noja Power reclosers, Honeywell energy meters, and surge protection devices. They also provide engineering support, protection studies, arc flash analysis, and digital twin implementation for utilities, EPC contractors, and industrial plants.

Esemec S.A. has 30 years of experience supplying low, medium, and high voltage equipment with exclusive representation of international brands. They provide turnkey solutions including supply, installation, and commissioning of transformers, distribution lines, and substations, with projects such as 138 kV autotransformers and 224,000 KVA installations in Ecuador.

LEISN offers complete HV/LV electrical equipment solutions, including low-voltage distribution cabinets, high-voltage switchgear with vacuum or SF6 insulation, transformers (dry-type and oil-immersed), and automation control systems integrating PLC and SCADA. Their systems feature remote monitoring, fault detection, and intelligent management for improved reliability and safety.
