

Mobile optical module price

AI Overview

The average purchase price of optical modules in 2024 ranged from $150 to $200 per unit, with high-speed modules for data centers and AI applications commanding higher prices. Current Pricing Overview In 2024, global sales of optical modules were estimated at 88–117 million units, with an average price range of $150–$200 per unit for standard modules. Prices vary significantly depending on data rate, form factor, and application. For example, modules supporting 400G, 800G, or 1.6T speeds for hyperscale data centers and AI clusters are priced higher due to advanced technology and performance requirements. Factors Affecting Price

Module Type and Speed: Higher-speed modules (400G/800G/1.6T) cost more than standard 100G or 200G modules due to increased complexity and silicon photonics integration.

Application: Data center modules, telecommunication modules, and automotive LiDAR modules have different pricing structures. Data center modules dominate revenue, while automotive modules are growing rapidly, sometimes with a 30% annual increase in demand.

Supply Chain and Lead Times: Lead times exceeding 12 weeks can affect pricing, especially for high-demand modules.

Regional Manufacturing: China produces over 70% of global optical modules, with Shenzhen and Suzhou as major hubs, which can influence cost due to local production efficiencies and tariffs.

Technological Advancements: Co-packaged optics, silicon photonics, and pluggable coherent optics are driving higher performance but can increase unit costs initially.

Market Trends

Price Declines in High-Speed Segments: Competition in the 400G segment has led to a 12% decrease in average selling prices in 2023.

Projected Growth: The global optical module market is expected to grow from $17.6 billion in 2024 to $56.8 billion by 2031, reflecting strong demand for high-speed modules.

Enterprise and Hyperscale Demand: Cloud providers and AI workloads are driving adoption of 400G–800G modules, which are increasingly critic...
