

Price of fiber optic cable binding method

AI Overview

A complete set of fiber optic cable binding equipment typically ranges from $1,000 to $20,000 or more, depending on machine type, automation level, and project scale.

Types of Fiber Optic Cable Binding Equipment

Cable Coiling and Spooling Machines Machines like the NEOFIBO ACCBM-0540Z integrate winding, cable tying, and cutting in one unit. They are suitable for power cords, USB, network, and fiber optic cables, with adjustable coil length, speed, and tie settings. These machines are highly automated and can cost several thousand dollars per unit depending on specifications and supplier.

High-Altitude or Handheld Binding Machines Devices such as the Onefind WF-60S are portable, hand-held tools designed for high-altitude cable attachment. They include batteries, remote switches, and poles, allowing a single operator to tie cables efficiently and safely. Prices for these machines typically range from $1,000 to $3,000 per set, depending on features and battery capacity.

Specialized Manufacturing Machines For large-scale production, fiber optic cable binding may involve extrusion machines, stranding machines, and coiling machines. These are industrial-grade machines with advanced automation, digital interfaces, and tension control systems. A full production line can cost $10,000 to $20,000 or more, depending on the number of machines and technical specifications.

Additional Cost Considerations

Materials and Accessories: Cable ties, reels, and insulation materials add to the total cost.

Labor and Installation: For network deployment, labor costs vary by region and project complexity.

Project Scope: Indoor short runs are cheaper, while outdoor installations with trenching and conduit increase costs significantly.

Supplier and Shipping: Prices may vary based on supplier location, shipping method, and order quantity. Many suppliers offer EXW, FOB, or CIF terms, and discounts may be available for bulk orders.
